Arlington, N. J., Man Chases Woman About House; Desists to Go for an Axe.

CHARGES INFIDELITY.

After His Arrest He Attempts to Hang Himself, Using His Suspenders as a Rope, but

ARLINGTON, N. J., Sept. 22.-Because August Seahouse, alias Williams, of Arlington, N. J., believed his wife, Henrietta, was unfaithful to him, he attempted to kill her and later tried to hang himself in his cell at the Kearny police station. Seahouse came home and found there George Brestman and Frank Brestman, of Jersey City. He drove the men wife. He knocked her nearly senseless with a blow on the head and then rushed at her with a knife threatening her life. He chased her about the house, but finally desisted for a short time saying he was going for an axe. The woman bruised and bleeding, rushed from the house and notified two policemen.

The officers went to the house and arrested Seahouse after a struggle. He fought all the way to the police station. When Sergt. Vreeland and Policeman John Whalen were going off duty they heard the cries of George Brestman, heard the cries of George Brestman, who was held as a witness. Rushing down stairs they found Seahouse hanging limp and apparently lifeless from his cell door. He had made a noose of his suspenders. He was cut down unconscious and it was thought for a time that he was dead, but he revived in an hour. in an hour.

"I will kill myself yet," he told the officers.

officers. Seahouse has a bad record, having served a term in State prison for murderous assault on a Jersey City policeman several years ago. He was held for the Grand Jury. Mrs. Seahouse denied her husband's charge of improper relations with the Brestmans. "He first brought them to the house as boarders," she said.
